

89.5% of first-year students feel their courses inspired them to think in new ways. But with so many new experiences, it can also be difficult for students to adjust. Understanding the first-year mindset and the impact of first-year programs is key to creating positive change.

Students look to faculty and peers to help them along the way.

Knowing that college is an important step for their career...

